Teaching Tip

When dealing with family topics, be aware that there may be sensitive areas for students, for example, if a parent or sibling has died, or if there is some other family problem. In these cases, help students to feel comfortable participating in the lesson without having to talk about personal matters.

Additional Activity

Men or Women? In groups, students draw a three-column chart on a piece of paper with the heads, Men, Women, Men and Women. Under each head they write the appropriate family words, according to whether the word refers to a man, a woman, or either. If students need help getting started, elicit all of the family words students know and write them on the board first.
