Choosing a career is difficult as there are so many different types of jobs available. In my opinion, people should choose a job that suits their personality, skills, and interests. Carefully considering their likes and dislikes can also help people to decide. Here are two people describing their jobs.

Hi, I'm Alia. Are you a person that likes to work in a team and enjoys sharing ideas? Then I think you would like a job in IT. I've been working in this job for three years now and I love it. I'm good at working closely with colleagues and customers. Together, we spend hours finding solutions to complicated computer problems. IT professionals need to have excellent communication and problem-solving skills. My work is very hard. The exams that I took at university when learning about computers were the most difficult ones I've ever taken! In the future, I'd be interested in managing my own IT company.

I'm Salim and I've been working as a racehorse trainer since last year. When I was younger, I wanted to be a doctor, but I found that

Next year, I plan to go to university to study to be a vet. I love animals and I'm hardworking. More importantly, I'm good at learning new things so I think it will be easy for me!
