"What's wrong, darling?" asked her mother. "You look worried."

"I ordered a new watch, which I haven't received yet," Reem began. "The seller had sent me an email weeks ago. I also received a message from the delivery company saying the item had been shipped! I had been checking my emails when I finally found the one sent from the seller. When I had read it, I clicked the link and it directed me to a pop up. I clicked on that, then..."

"You clicked on them?" said her mother, furiously.

"It directed me to a page where I found a picture of a medal. I reckon it's a new PC game! I thought to myself, so I clicked on it. A message appeared that said 'Congratulations! You've won a mobile phone!' then my laptop shutdown unexpectedly!"

"Quick! We need to take your laptop to the nearest repair shop!" her mother said. "You should never buy things on the internet without asking me!"

When they arrived at the repair shop, Reem spoke to the IT engineer. "I hope you can fix my laptop by tonight. I have school tomorrow and I use my laptop in lessons and for quizzes every day! I also have an online class. Oh, no! My final exam! I had been revising but there's more to do and it's tomorrow! Will you be able to recover all files?" Reem anxiously asked him.

"Leave it with me," the engineer said.

Later, when they returned to collect the laptop, the engineer explained what the solution had been. "At first, I had intended to replace the hard drive," he said. "but then, I realised that this kind of virus could be removed using antivirus software, so I installed some. You should have antivirus software active on your computer all the time because it can protect you from these kinds of attacks. As soon as I had finished recovering all the files, through a data recovery program, I tried uploading several new files onto the computer. I retrieved and deleted these practice files, so now I'm quite sure your important work is all complete and your computer is safe."

In spite of having a bad day, Reem was optimistic about her laptop incident. She learned a valuable lesson and promised her mother to always be careful.

Yousif's Career Change

Dear Mr. Ali Al Ansari,

As the new branch manager, I was thinking of setting up a meeting next week. We have many new projects to discuss and new work tasks to set, but what I'd like more than anything is to discuss the new workers we've had who need to be introduced to their roles. This time next week, I will be working from my new office. For now, I will be finishing all outstanding duties by tomorrow. I'll also work on these files to submit them by noon.

I fully understand my duties and I have some plans that will help increase the quality of the team's production. For instance, I was thinking of dividing them into smaller groups in the meeting to help give tasks fairly amongst them. I believe that I could easily recognise any outstanding work performers, which is really beneficial. I also believe that this will ensure a safe work environment as well as leading them towards achieving all of their goals. I was also thinking of reducing their working hours to just five a day. I'll also allow them to have an hour to workout at a gym nearby. I'm basing this decision on my experience at my previous company where it was agreed that employees produced better-quality work when they worked out regularly.

Before I made the changes at my previous company, my employees worked six days a week, eight hours a day. As soon as I changed that to four days a week, five hours a day, their stress level decreased. They started to enjoy their work a lot more, which was not surprising at all. It helped them finish all of their tasks on time. They had more time for their family, friends, and hobbies. They also stopped asking for a raise.

Thank you again for this opportunity. I am looking forward to working with you.

Kind regards,

Yousif Mohammed

2. What is paragraph 2 discussing?

تم تحميل هذا الملف من

موقع المناهج الإماراتية

a. how technology has changed a workplace

b. how packaging was done before using machines

c. how beneficial machines are for people

alManahj.com/ae

The Other Side of Technology

Before the invention of computers, almost every job and task had to be carried out by people. However, the recent advances in technology and AI, means that these have been playing an increasingly significant role in replacing humans in the workplace. It seemed as if people had been working in jobs that could have easily been done by machines and it only took the invention of more sophisticated computer programmes to cause their jobs to change. Therefore, I decided to investigate the subject further to discover if this theory might be true. I spoke to Salem, the manager of a clothing factory, which had recently replaced many of its staff members with goods-packaging machines.

"Before we purchased the packaging machines," he explained, "it took the staff almost a day to prepare one shipment. Whereas now, using the machines, the work will have been completed in a third of the time. It goes without saying that this is a huge benefit for the company because, as well as making the processes faster, using the state-of-the-art technology raises interest in our brand. This, in turn, increases profits while lowering staffing costs. So, no matter how it affects the people who work here, I'm keen on introducing more technology into the factory."

Some people, though, are not as enthusiastic. I spoke to Amal, who's on the point of losing her job working as a receptionist. She says that soon, her role will have been replaced by a robot. She also adds says that AI, is being used more and more at work, and some employees have already been replaced by machines and so I asked her how she felt about it.

"When someone told me about it, I was sad," she replied. "It appeared as though the requirement for humans had been reduced by the rise of technology. It's just so sad! I suppose if I'd studied computing at university, I'd probably be enjoying a job where I'd be working with technology. In fact, I was planning to change my career so I'm on the point of retraining as a computer engineer. Even though I don't agree with the thought of introducing so much technology in workplaces, it should allow me to get ahead with my career."

"What do you think will happen in the future?" I asked her.

"I predict that the technical advances will stop at one point. People are anxious now, but I am certain that human workers will be needed like before," she replied.
