Khalid's Big Day

Although my alarm clock was ringing loudly, I was reluctant to drag myself from bed because it was ceremony day, and I was due to receive my diploma. Filled with enthusiasm, Mum bang repeatedly at my door, eager for me to wake up and get ready for the event which I had been fearing for days. Although I blocked my ears, I could still hear a familiar singing voice filling up the house like a cloud of thick smoke. I was quite certain it must be Aunt Maryam.

It was obvious by their behaviour that they were more concerned about today's ceremony than I was.

"Leave me alone. Please," I begged.

They deliberately ignored my request, and both continued banging aggressively at my door. Filled with a huge wave of frustration, I pulled open the door, shouting, "Mum, stop! You are being rude."

"You don't want to go, do you? Khalid, this degree you completed is reported to be one of the most complex courses in the country and above all, your test scores, which you won a variety of trophies for, are among the best in the region. Your determination has resulted in you becoming a fully qualified medical professional. This certificate is the reward you so very much deserve," she responded, in a startlingly direct manner.

I was certain, if the universities had sent the invitations earlier, giving us more notice, my father would have been able to book a flight in time and that's what was causing me the most disappointment. My father is certainly more interested in my educational studies than any of his current work projects in Europe and would love to be here. I was heartbroken, but I wanted to please my mother, so I attended the ceremony anyway.

"Khalid Al Ali!"

I nervously approached the stage, guided by the bright lights, felt a firm pat on my right shoulder. It must be Ahmed from biology. He is one of the most annoying boys in school and often hits people in class, I thought.

"Congratulations, my son."

It couldn't be, could it? I thought

"You made it!" My eyes lit up with delight. There he stood, the man who'd looked after me my whole life, teary eyed but bursting with pride.

1- Khalid didn't get out of bed because he didn't

- a- hear his alarm clock go off
- b- wish to see his mum
- c- want to go to graduation day

2-What made Khalid annoyed with his mother?

Reading Part 2
Alternative Energy Now!

Alternative Energy Now! is being released to encourage global leaders to do more to tackle complex factors, such as overpopulation of urban developments, which are resulting in rising temperatures. The documentary looks at the alternative energy sources that are being employed by nations in order to battle the climate crisis and focuses mainly on the countries which are more interested in making real change than others. One of the most concerning aspects of the documentary is that a report stated some of those global positions speak positively for change and share their innovative ideas during global climate meeting. However, when it comes to implementing these projects, they do very little. What shocked me the most was the report that suggested if countries had, in fact, studied the data in the early nineties when concerns were raised, we would have a much more positive outlook today. Spoiler alert: Experts predict a frightening future.

The documentary explains how wind energy is thought to be among the best cleanest energy sources because it has little negative impact on the environment, and therefore, reduces the reliance on sources that create fossil fuels. In China and the US, wind turbines are being replaced in coastal regions, open plains, and mountain areas, making them a constant source of energy from the continuing high winds. The turbines gather through air in motion and use it to generate electricity.

More good news! Roofs are being replaced with greener options across American cities to combat rising temperatures. In 2001, Chicago covered 20.000 square feet of its city hall roof with vegetation. It was reported to have made a 50-degree difference in temperature to the building, which resulted in a reduction in cooling and heating costs and overall energy demand in comparison to a nearby tar roof building.

Solar power is believed to be more popular with individual households today than other energy sources. This might be because it was reported by a European government that installing the panels can also make homes more cost efficient. Although solar panels are easily accessible, meaning people can take more control of their energy use rather than relying on large scale government projects such as wind farms, they are extremely costly and only produce energy for half the day due to reliance on sunlight.

1-The documentary states that cities are heating up at a faster rate due to the

- a- absence of climate change initiative
- b- lack of alternative energy sources
- c- growth of population

2-A number of world leaderswhen it's time to put climate initiatives in place.

- a) are lazy and uninterested
- b) appear enthusiastic and positive
- C) often share their ideas

3- The author was surprised by the report because countries didn't

- a) review the statistics earlier
- b) have a positive outlook
- c) predict this negative outcome

4- What is the main focus of paragraph 2?

- a) the harmful emissions generated by China and the US
- b) the actions taken to generate clean energy
- c) the negative effect of a renewable energy technology

5- What is located in coastal spaces?

- a) solar panels
- b) roof vegetation
- c) wind technology

6- What is being installed on top of urban buildings to battle temperature increases?

- A) wind turbines
- B) tar roofs
- C) plants

7) According to the author, solar panels is becoming more commonly known because

- A) solar panels are said to be more economical.
- B) government-run alternative energy initiatives are too slow.
- C) the panels are not expensive to buy

8) According to the documentary, what is a significant difference between solar energy and wind energy?

- A) Solar energy is more widely used in the US and China than wind energy
- B) Solar energy is less efficient than wind energy
- C) Solar energy makes homes more cost efficient, unlike expensive wind-powered homes.

A Business that Truly Delivers

In 2004, Talabat was launched by its creators in Kuwait. When the company began, the focus was on creating partnerships with restaurants by providing delivery services to get food to customers within the country. Delivery services were only available during the hours that restaurants in Kuwait were open. A customer would order their food online and Talabat's customer care employees would call the restaurant and place the order for the customer. Then the delivery driver was sent to the restaurant to pick up the order and deliver it to the customer.

In contrast to when the company began in 2004, Talabat has become the largest food delivery service in the Middle East and North Africa after the company was purchased by Delivery Hero. Talabat now offers a delivery service for groceries, flowers, and items from pharmacies. They have introduced a 24-hour grocery delivery service that guarantees delivery in 30 minutes or less.

By the end of the first 3 years under the ownership of Delivery hero, Talabat had hired a new CEO. Before working for Talabat Tomaso Rodriguez had worked at food delivery businesses in Europe and Asia. Rodriguez hopes to create communities experience moments that matter through apps and online tools. Starting a unified food-delivery service, so as to put people's happiness and satisfaction the center of its business.

By the end of summer of 2023, Rodriguez had worked as if he were a delivery driver for several days to discover issues that impact employees and customers. He decided to do this during the summer months so that he could experience delivery drivers' conditions in peak temperatures. Rodriguez discovered that the summer heat was not a problem while riding the motorbike; however, when stopped at traffic lights or waiting to pick up deliveries the heat became extreme. In response to this issue, not only did Talabat provide air-conditioned buses for drivers use between deliveries, but they also added UV windshields to their motorbikes. This way drivers will experience a cooler ride. Rodriguez is seeking solutions for drivers' issues with parking and access to buildings which will improve service for customers.

As the leader of a company, Rodriguez believes that there are issues that statistics and data cannot reveal. If he had not volunteered to become a delivery driver he probably would have been unaware of the issues they face every day. He plans to go undercover again in the future to regularly to learn and implement solutions to improve both drivers and customers' experiences.

1- Which of the following is true about Talabat’s delivery process in the early years?

- a. The driver called the restaurant to request an order.
- b. The consumer selected desired items from the website.
- c. Customer service took orders from the businesses to people’s homes.

2- How is Talabat different now from when it started in 2004?

- a- When it started, it had limited hours of operation, but now customers can order food items at any time.
- b- Its delivery service spread throughout Kuwait in the beginning and now they are available worldwide.
- c- It used to provide delivery for many different items, however, now only deliver food.

3- Tomaso Rodriguez was a good fit for Talabat’s senior management because he had

..... .

- a. worked in the food industry.
- b. travelled around the world.
- c. developed community programmes.

4- According to Tomaso Rodriguez,is the most important aspect of his business.

- A-technology
- B-enjoyment
- C-food quality

5- Tomaso Rodriguez pretended to be a delivery driver to

- A- improve drivers’ work issues
- b- understand drivers’ work issues
- C-experience the heat of the UAE summer

6- What can be inferred about the future of Talabat under Rodriguez’s leadership?

- a- The company may expand its delivery services to other sectors
- b- Talabat will be available in other places outside of the Middle East
- C- It could become one of the best companies for drivers to work for.

7- Which of the following best represents the author’s view of leadership?

- a- The best leaders help others to achieve their goals
- b- Every business needs an experienced leader
- c Leaders should know about all aspects of their business

8- The main purpose of this whole text is to

- a- persuade people to order from restaurants
- b-explain how a successful business developed
- c-inform on how to establish a successful business

Writing Section (Inference and Justification)

Task 1

It was a pleasant, sunny day and Mattise pushed Violet gently on the swing. She squealed happily as it went back and forth. After a while, Matisse began to get bored. He raced off towards the biggest slide he could see. Violet struggled to get off the swing and began to toddle her way towards the slide Matisse was already zooming down. Violet had just reached the bottom of the slide when Matisse ran towards the climbing frame. “Mattie! Mattie! Wait for me, “She shouted as she tried to catch up with him. Matissa scrambled his way up the climbing frame like a monkey scaling a tree. Violet managed to reach up to the first rung but couldn’t manage to get her leg to reach. She sat down on the ground and began to cry.

- Where are Violet and Mattise? (Inference)

Task 2

On August 3, 1492, Christopher Columbus set sail from Palos, Spain, with less than a hundred crew members to discover a new route to Asia. After spending a difficult time at sea, the party sighted land early on the morning of October 12, 1492. They set foot on an island in the Bahamas which they named Al Salvador. Columbus presumed that the indigenous people were Native Indians as he was under the mistaken belief that he had set foot on Indian soil. Probably some 10 million American Indians were natives to the land before the large-scale inhabitation by Europeans and subsequent annihilation of Native Americans started.

However, it took more than a hundred years after Columbus discovered America for the Europeans to finally take the momentous decision to make the New World their home.

The Native Americans actually welcomed the pale-skinned visitors primarily out of curiosity than anything else. They were fascinated by the steel knives and swords, fire spewing cannons, brass and copper utensils, etc. that these visitors brought with them. Eventually, cultural differences erupted. The natives could not stomach the arrogance of the newcomers and the scant respect they paid to nature. The European settlers viewed every resource — plants, animals, and people as something to be commercially exploited.

The native Indians were vastly outnumbered in the wars that ensued. The resistance they put up never proved enough to stop the European settlers. The nomadic lifestyle of the Indians, the relatively unsophisticated weapons at their disposal, the unwillingness of some of their own people to defend themselves, and the diseases of the white men — all contributed to the virtual elimination of their race. Some of the diseases brought by Europeans from their overcrowded cities that decimated the natives were: small pox, plague, measles, cholera, typhoid, and malaria. These deadly diseases, to which most natives had developed no resistance, devastated many tribes between 1775 and 1850.

America was named after an Italian navigator, Amerigo Vespucci, who explored the Northern parts of South America in 1499 and 1500 and later announced to the world about the discovery of a new continent.

Task 3

Read the passage and answer the question based on it.

During our college days there was a common teaser we used to discuss “what that is there comes in our lives and never goes back, and what is that which goes and never comes back?” The answer was known to almost everybody but still someone will raise his or her hand and answer the riddle as if the answer was known to him/her only, and the answer was: "It's old age that comes and never goes back and it's the innocent childhood that goes and never comes back". But this riddle got lost somewhere in the struggle of life.

The struggle for “bread and butter” is so cruel that the age and innocence of childhood have no meaning for it but still there are imprudent men who laugh at the time and say “we will never allow the child within us taken away by the kidnappers of time” and such people always enjoy the company of that child within.

I vividly remember the days when my father used to have a strange kind of joy on his face seeing thick black clouds, and as soon as rain started, he would run outside the house like a child (he was 58 at that time) and jump and sometime roll down on ground enjoying the freshly made rainwater pond, singing a song of his choice.

We used to get surprised at his child-like act and would ask him repeatedly to come back inside else he would catch cold or fever but he would always say, "Beta mere andar jo bachcha hai voh mujhe kehta hai mein abhi mara nahin hoon, chalo barish mein nahate hain, and I cannot stop my feet to stay within the four walls."

Today my father is no more with us but whenever there is torrential rain and my own children enjoy the rain as papa used to do, I always feel his presence around, whispering into my ears, if you want to live a pleasant and long life, never let the child within you die.

Nature has given us so many gifts to enjoy and rain is one of them but most of us ignore the joys coming in our way, falling prey to the tiring day-to-day life. But I never forget to pay a tribute to my father and always become a child with my children whenever they enjoy rain. Only a hot cup of coffee brings me back to my adulthood after the rain and keeps my father alive, the child alive.

- What do you infer out of the passage?

- A. There is a child within all of us with whom one should not lose the contact in order to enjoy the life to the fullest.
- B. One should behave in a childish manner to overcome stress in life.
- C. Rain is the only natural bestowal that lets you enjoy the bliss and charm of life.
- D. The struggle for livelihood is becoming so cruel by the day that one tends to lose on the personal time.

- Justify your answer.

General Tips on Writing an Essay:

- 1- Analyze the question and understand it well before starting planning.
- 2- If you are asked to write an essay, you should write in separate paragraphs.
- 3- Make your introduction to-the-point and concise. Keep in mind that you are paving the way to the topic and you are only introducing the topic to the reader. Do not spend too much in the introduction.
- 4- Using proper linkers and transitional phrases are essential to ensure that your piece of writing is cohesive and coherent.
- 5- After finishing your piece of writing, it's recommended to proofread it trying to correct your mistakes.
- 6 Always start the sentences with a capital letter and end them with the proper end marks.
- 7- Vary sentences length by incorporating simple, compound, complex and compound-complex sentences into your writing.

Sentence starters, linking words, transitional phrases

Using linking words within and between sentences and paragraphs helps to make your writing flow logically. These words act as signposts, assisting your reader to move easily from one idea to the next, and to see relationships between sentences or paragraphs. Linking words are particularly useful for indicating that you are going to explain something, to give an example or to use a time sequence, or to offer a contrasting view.
