Part 3: Inference Question

Text

The Investigators

While she looked at her detailed notes, interviews, images and videos, Marsha, a private investigator, felt particularly pleased with herself due to the amount of effort they represented. She had been working far more hours than required to make her case against the criminal; now she just needed to figure out who he was – and today was that day. If only we had installed this technology earlier, we wouldn't still be looking for him now, Marsha thought sadly to herself. Meanwhile, she looked at her partner, Jane, and noticed that her head was nodding with sleep. Jane considered it a more valuable use of her time to watch TV programmes than to participate in the task at hand.

Annoyed, Marsha shouted at Jane, "Let's keep working!" while shaking her awake. "We're trying to find him because he's copied our client's identity and is using it as his own. It's suspected that he is guilty of hundreds of cases as well!" She emphasised this point while impatiently tapping her finger on the pile of paper. "He's bold and seems to like to test himself too! It's believed that he is also responsible for the recent data leak, which resulted in the credit card numbers of hundreds of thousands of people being released to the public. If this is the case, he must be a very knowledgeable person who enjoys what he does. He might just be one of the most intelligent individuals we have ever encountered."

Jane yawned, pointing lazily at an icon on the computer, "Using this software to find him is useless." She yawned again, "It is much better to consider your notes carefully than to put your hope in this over-rated technology."

Marsha responded, "Well... I have a feeling this will be among the most valuable technologies that we have ever used. It's cutting-edge and is being used globally for a variety of purposes. For example, if someone had been charged with a crime, an image of their face would now be in the database and unique features would be stored as code, ready for our comparison," she added, hoping to change Jane's mind.

The time had arrived. This was by far the most awaited moment after many months of work. With trembling, sticky hands and a racing heart, Marsha started the program. Although her screen had been blank, it quickly transformed with a burst of life into a crowd of faces. Pacing up and down with wide eyes fixed on the computer screen, she was most surprised when, out of nowhere, a message flashed on the screen – a red flashing signal – a match! Marsha's eyes narrowed to read the information staring back at her, causing her to breathe deeply with relief. "Finally!" she sighed.

Write your answer below. Use full sentences.

What are the investigators' attitudes towards their jobs?

Investigators are very smart and patient that never lose hope and if they put something in their minds they insist to do it. Also they follow the technology and what is new in their field which help them to solve these cases and identify the criminal.

Part 3: Justification Question

Write your answer below. Use full sentences.

Why is your answer to the inference question the best answer?
Use the information in the text above to support your answer.

My answer to inference is the best answer because we can see how Marsha insisted to try the new machine until it worked at the end and did not listen to her colleague.
