Life changes in every respect including families. Write an essay about families now and then.

Include the following in your essay:

- ❖ How were families in the past compared with today
- ❖ What is/are the effect(s) of social media on families today
- ❖ What changes will happen with families in the future

You should write 200 words

Family provides a greater sense of security and belonging. Family structure has changed a lot Now and then, Social media and parents' work has a great impact on family relationship.

Families in the past were different from families today. In the past families were extended families that include three or more generations living together in one big house, including parents' children, grandparents and uncles, and aunts, However, families today are immediate families that include parents and children only. This change is because of the migration from farms to cities. Extended families often gathered for family events for helping and supporting each other, This created positive relationships and pass traditions when grandparents traditions. All these things are missing in immediate families today.

Families today are addicted to social media with more social media we have. We think that we connecting, yet we are disconnecting from each other Families don't have more time to visit each other face to face, because it's an easier way to connect by social media. According to a study on media influence, kids spent over 7 hours a day using electronic media, as a result, technology is breaking down family communication. The children were found to be more likely to engage in risky behaviors

Future will have a big change in families' children will interact with their parents via more technology. Using computers, and hand-held devices, children will be taught how to read and do math and play games, by robots. There will be more gender equality between males and females in sharing responsibilities and households Moreover virtual families will be more common in the future.

In conclusion... social media is a big factor in this family change. I think Setting aside family time, such as family meals, game nights, and talking about each other's free of phones, is a key to learning to interact with each other face-to-face. The role model of Extended families helps children gain desired behavior and good values.

The lifestyle in your culture today is different from your grandparents'. Technology has played a vital role in people's lives. It has a great impact on our lifestyle. In this essay, I will talk about lifestyle now and then, and how it will be in the future.

In the past lifestyle was different from today. young teenagers left school at 12 to work and support their families. They worked hard from sunrise to sunset. They didn't have much free time to meet friends or play games because they went home back exhausted from tiring work, they had healthy lifestyles by eating natural organic food. Nowadays teenagers complete their educations and have more free time to meet friends and play games using social media. They depend more on fast food which leads to some health problems. Some do outdoor activities like sports.

Technology affects almost every aspect of 21st-century life, from transport efficiency and safety to access to food and healthcare, and productivity. The power of the internet has enabled global communities to share ideas and resources more easily to be However, the overuse of some technology has been linked to a decline in mental health, as staring at the screen for a long time causes health problems.

Virtual schools will be more popular. Lessons will be explained by robot teachers. Drones will deliver shopping, and smart homes with robots will make household chores easier people talk to machines and gives order to them.

In conclusion, our lifestyle is always changing because of technology and social media.

I think the lifestyle is more relaxing and comfortable. Everything is done by just pressing the button., But we should reduce using devices and practice outdoor activities like sports to be active and have a healthy lifestyle

Task 6

Nowadays most parents have a job. Parents want to achieve a balance between family and career both the father and the mother work. Write an opinion essay about work of the balance between work and life. (200 words)

- Why do both parents need to work?
- How does parents' work affect family life?
- How can men and women balance life and work

Nowadays most parents have a job. Parents want to achieve a balance between family and career. The work of both parents affects widely on family life. Some people think working with both parents have some advantages while others disagree with this point of view. I think only a few families manage to achieve a balance between jobs and families.

First of all, working with both parents have a lot of advantages. Nowadays the demand of life requires both parents to work full-time. The main reason is to raise the family income and increase the standard of living. As a result, both parents work to earn more money to raise their children well and be able to provide a good education for them as the expenses increase. Furthermore, children learn some skills like responsibility when they look after their younger siblings.

Women worked in many fields of work like banking, business, medicine, law, and policy. She reached a high point at work. She gained some skills such as independence, power, equality with men, and strength, besides wealth and supporting her. I strongly agree with women's work as I believe that with the increased cost of living, one income is not enough, so both parents should work to support life.

On the other hand, there are some negative sides to working with both parents. It affects badly on family life relations which is full of stress. This will create an emotional gap between parents and children, for example, They don't have more time to spend their time with children and monitor their behavior. This leads to a family breakup and threatens family stability. Furthermore, with the lack of care from parents, problems become popular like addiction to drugs and more bad behavior like bullying.

In conclusion, Parents want to achieve a balance between family and career. I think Parents can share chores and responsibilities. They also work on shifts or have flexible work, so that they could change time off work easily. Wealthy people can hire a nanny or ask for help from relatives. They should organize their time and involve children in the household. Parents should try hard to keep a balance between life and work.

Task 7

Families raise their children in different ways. Is it bad for parents to always dote on their kids?

Write an opinion essay about parent way to raise their children. (200 words)

- *Is it bad for parents to always dote on their kids?
- *How does upbringing affect the behavior of a child?
- *How are parents supposed to treat their children?

Families raise their children in different ways. Some families think it is good to treat children easily, while others disagree with this point of view. I think families should treat children wisely because Family is the basis of society. It provides members to society.

Some families dote on their children. They think that it is a kind of much care and love. For example, they do everything that the child needs or likes. Extended families have played a role in spoiling the children, especially the youngest child. Other parents favor one child more than others like the oldest or the youngest. Parents are busy all time at work so they try to achieve Child's desire and bring whatever he wants. As a result of this. I think doting will lead to some bad behavior like arrogance or feeling one is better than others and selfishness when one thinks of themselves only. At the same time, favoritism in one child surely resents the other siblings and creates bitterness, jealousy, and hate which leads to violence and conflict.

On the other hand, other parents believe it is better to treat children in a tough way. due to their perception, when children get harsh criticism, the child will learn from their mistakes and won't make wrong things, so they become more responsible. This surely affected badly on self-esteem. They will have no confidence. In this way, the child will learn bad behavior like lying as he is afraid of punishment. I strongly disagree with them. In my opinion, when children are badly hurt by their parents, they can't forget this treatment all their life and build weak personalities.

In conclusion, some parents dote on their children while others harshly treat them. In my point of view, parents should be fair with children and advise them. They try to build a positive relationship with them to be a good citizen who can serve themselves, their family, and their home as well.

Task 8

Child care affects the relationships between family members because in most houses both the father and the mother work. Write an essay about the responsibility of raising children.

- How has raising children changed over time
- What options do parents have today to raise children
- How can men and women balance life and work

Parenting has changed a lot over the years
Parenting is a lot different now than it was even just a few decades ago—and it will continue to change as our world does.

Parenting styles have changed over the years, In the past, parents were more likely to adhere to strict rules and schedules with little room for flexibility. Families used to be larger, so parents didn't have as much one-on-one time with their kids. The parent style was command and control—kids have to obey their elders without question. Nowadays parents give children more freedom and independence.

Some parents dote on their children while others harshly treat them. Both ways are the wrong ways of bringing up. In my point of view, parents should be fair, moderate with children and advise them, It is important to give children more freedom and independence. The family relationship should be based on love, care, and understanding .family teach them good manners and values to ensure your kids grow up respecting others, they try to build a positive relationship with them to be good citizens who can serve themselves, their family, and their home as well.

Parents want to achieve a balance between family and career. I think Parents can share chores and responsibilities. They also work on shifts or have flexible work, so that they could change the time of work easily. Wealthy people can hire a nanny or ask for help from relatives. They should organize their time and involve children in the household. Parents should try hard to keep a balance between life and work.

In conclusion, strong families give children a safe, secure place to be themselves and learn about who they are. Because children in strong families feel secure and loved, they have the confidence to explore their world, try new things, and learn. And they can deal better with challenges with family support
