EMIRATI TEEN DELIVERS GREENS

As part of our series on young, successful Emiratis, this week we are speaking to Majed Al Kaabi. At the age of nineteen he had already set up his own food delivery company which is currently valued at 20 million AED. We asked him how he got the idea for his business.

'Well, we were studying healthy eating habits at school, and I found it really interesting. I also became worried about my family since the lessons made me realize how unhealthy our diet was.'

So, Majed decided to try and change his family's dietary habits. He had always been interested in cooking, so he started to prepare the daily meals and eventually took control of the weekly grocery shopping. When his family noticed the benefits of their new healthy lifestyle, they began to tell their friends and neighbours.

'Whenever a neighbour was having a dinner party, they would pay me to prepare and deliver the food. Pretty soon I was getting orders every day and often several orders for one evening. It was crazy. I wouldn't have been able to cope with both school and the business unless I changed something.'

So how did Majed cope with the increasing demand for his healthy food as well as keep up with his schoolwork? It must have been difficult to balance school while expanding his business.

1.What was the initial motivation for Majed Al Kaabi to start his food delivery business?

- a) He wanted to make extra money to support his family.
- b) He became concerned about his family's unhealthy eating habits.
- c) He studied business strategies in school.

2.Why did Majed's neighbors start paying him to prepare food?

- a) They enjoyed his food during a school event.
- b) They noticed his family's improved health and trusted his cooking.
- c) Majed advertised his services through social media.

3.What does the word "cope" most likely mean in the sentence, "I wouldn't have been able to cope with both school and the business unless I changed something"?

- a) Manage
- b) Avoid
- c) Resist

4.What change did Majed most likely make to balance school and his growing business?

- a) He stopped attending school altogether.
- b) He hired staff to assist with his business operations.
- c) He reduced the number of orders he accepted daily.

5.What is the main purpose of this passage?

- a) To explain how young Emiratis are being encouraged to study healthy eating habits.
- b) To highlight Majed Al Kaabi's journey to success as a young entrepreneur.
- c) To provide a guide for starting a food delivery business.
