No, I didn't like Adam. He acted as if he owned this business.

Meaning	Adam didn't own the business but behaved like he did.
Grammatical structure	Structure equivalent to second conditional 'as if / as though' + past tense clause
	We can use 'as if / as though' and a past simple clause (with a
Usage	present meaning) when we express that something is either being presented as something that it is not or to talk about something we know would be impossible.
Other examples	Her motivational speech was amazing. It is as if she knew the thoughts of everyone in her audience. Molly acts as if she were the teacher. Confidently raising his hand, it looked as though he knew the answer.

Future Perfect Passive

Usage	Future perfect passive is used to talk about actions or events that will be finished by a certain moment in the future. We use the passive voice to emphasize the action, not the person doing the action, by moving the object of the sentence into the subject position.
Other examples	The order will have been delivered by the time he receives his invoice. A new sports arena will have been built by next year, creating many business opportunities. The accounts for the project will have been completed by next week.

No Matter

No matter how much that handbag costs, we are buying it.

MeaningRegardless of the cost, the speaker will buy theitem.GrammaticalstructureClefting and fronting'No matter' + relative pronouns + clause

No Matter

Usage من	'Fronting' is used to emphasize the information in the first clause ' No matter how much '. In this case, using 'No matter' emphasizes that 'regardless of the circumstances' the outcome will be the same. 'Clefting' means a single message is divided across two clauses. We use cleft sentences to connect what is already understood to what is new to the listener. Emphasis is placed on the new information by moving it to the beginning of the sentence.
Other examples	No matter what you say, I will still be attending the meeting. No matter the risk, it certainly worth a try. It will eventually close down, no matter how much you try and save the business.

No Matter

I will follow the advice because it is good no matter who gave it. No matter how far the place is, we still are going. You can't go inside the president's house no matter who you are. You can be happy no matter what happens. No matter how hard t is, just keep going. I will choose what I want no matter what she says. No matter how many times you explained it to, I won't understand it.

Passive Reporting Statements

It is believed that over 50 people attended the party.

Meaning It is common knowledge that 50 people went to the party.

Grammatical structure

Passive reporting statements It + passive reporting verb + (that) + clause subject + passive reporting verb + to + infinitive

Passive Reporting Statements

Passive reporting statements are used to report information where the source is unknown or not important. The use of the passive structure obscures the source of the information. Reported statements are often used in a formal style or to report facts.

Usage

It was reported that the sports center had closed down. It was announced that the New Year sales begin today. It is thought that the rain will continue into next week.

Passive Reporting Statements

The prime minister is believed to be on the point of resigning.

Term 2: Grammar Points

Cleft Sentences

Only if you work hard, will you find business success.

Usage

Cleft Sentences

We use the first conditional with 'only' to talk about a present condition that has a future result. The condition (success in business) is emphasized by putting it first in the sentence. The use of 'Only if' strengthens the condition. In inversion, the verb 'will' is placed before the subject 'you'.

Only if we leave soon, will we be on time for work. (first conditional) Only if I won a million dirhams, would I travel around the world. (second conditional)

Only if you do well in your exams, will we buy you a new laptop. (first conditional)

GRAMMAR

Mixed Conditionals

If I hadn't gone to the football camp, I wouldn't be a professional player. If I'd revised for my exam, I would have a better mark. If I wasn't afraid of heights, I would have gone to Jebal Jais.

Meaning	This person became an important football player (present result) because they went to a football camp (past event). The speaker didn't revise (past event) so got a bad mark (present result). The speaker is scared of heights (present condition - now or always), so did not go on the trip (past result – before now).
Grammatical structure	Mixed conditional Past condition / present result - If + past perfect, would/wouldn't + infinitive Past result / present condition - If + past simple, would have + past participle

Mixed Conditionals

We use mixed conditionals with past perfect in the if clause to talk about the present results of past events. The speaker became a football player (present result) because he went to the football camp (past action). We can also use it to talk about an imaginary situation in the past and its probable result in the present. If the speaker had revised (but they didn't revise), they would have got a good mark (but they got a bad mark). We use mixed conditionals with past simple in the 'if' clause to talk about imaginary present situations and their probable (but imaginary) past results. If the speaker wasn't afraid of heights (but they are), they would have gone on a past trip to Jebal Jais (but they didn't go).

If I'd worked harder at school, I'd have a better job now. She would be here now if anyone had told her about the event.
