Hamad's Travels

My name is Hamad. My wife's name is Moza and we have two children. Our daughter Aisha is 16 and our son Fahad is 14 years old now. I work as an engineer for an international company. Because of my job, my family and I have had to live in different countries with a variety of environments.

My first job abroad was in the polar regions of Canada. When we moved there, Fahad was only two and Aisha was four years old. We lived in a house in a small town there for three years, and it was sometimes difficult because everything was covered with ice and snow.

After that, we moved to Kenya, which has a very different environment. It is a hot country and it rains a lot there. Much of Kenya is covered with rainforest, which looks very beautiful. I worked in a small town in the mountains, but we lived in a big city there. Sometimes, we went on trips to small villages in the rainforest. The children and I liked those trips. However, my wife didn't enjoy them because she thought some animals could be a danger to the children.

Ahmad's Trip to Pompeii

Last year, I went to Italy on holiday. It is a beautiful country and I saw many interesting places. One of the best was Pompeii. It was a town that was destroyed by a volcano about 2,000 years ago. I learned a lot about the history of Pompeii and about volcanoes.

A volcano is a kind of mountain with a hot liquid inside, called magma. Sometimes, volcanoes erupt. When this happens, the magma comes out and it is called lava. An eruption of a volcano can be very dangerous, but many towns are built near volcanoes. People choose to live there because those areas can be very good for growing crops.

Pompeii was near a volcano called Mount Vesuvius. On one summer day, the volcano erupted and destroyed Pompeii and its people. The whole city was covered by the dust from the volcano. People couldn't find Pompeii again for 1,500 years, but now it is easy for tourists to go there and see the city.
