Looking for a Job

Once, there was a boy called John. He was eleven years old. His family was poor. His parents were looking for a job, but it was very difficult. They didn't study at university, so companies didn't want them. After two weeks, Lucy, John's mother, got a job. It was a happy day and Lucy brought home some beautiful cakes for the family. John's mother walked to the end of the street every day. The bus stopped there, and she travelled to her office on it. She liked her job, but Charles, his father, still couldn't find work. One day, Charles saw a sign in a restaurant saying, "Waiter wanted." He quickly went inside and talked to the manager. The manager said, "I'm sorry. I gave someone the last job just half an hour ago. I don't need any more waiters." Charles was upset and the manager felt bad. Finally, he gave Charles a job as a cook. When he told his son, John was very happy, but worried too. "Dad, you can't cook," John said. Charles laughed, but he knew his son was right. It was difficult at first, but Charles learned quickly and became a great cook. The manager was very pleased because the restaurant was full every night. John's family was very happy again.

Jobs

As young children, many people probably dreamed of being an astronaut. Most children like learning amazing facts about stars and space. One or two people might be clever enough to get this job, but most of us have to find jobs that are not so unusual.

When they go to university at seventeen, a lot of young people study physics and biology. They study hard, but most of them also find new activities to do in their free time. Students like to play sports and do activities like painting and taking photos. A few learn to play musical instruments and must practise daily. Computers are very important for learning, but they can also be dangerous. Some students spend hours playing computer games and don't do all their homework. When they get a job, people can use the information they learned at university.

Fifty years ago, most girls got married when they left school. They worked hard, but they didn't work for money. They looked after the family and kept the house clean and tidy. Now, girls want to be scientists, doctors and police officers, just like boys. If a student finds a job that uses subjects and hobbies they like, they will enjoy their work.
