A) Read the passage and answer the following questions.

Far away in Mexico, Martha lived in a small town. She was extremely fond of learning. She had a big dream for her future job, but, unfortunately, she couldn't go to school because the nearest one was about 10 kms away.

One day, Janicke, Martha's mother, heard about the Khan Academy. Curious and excited, Janicke quickly signed up her daughter so that Martha could fulfil her dream.

In the maths classes, Martha learned to solve problems correctly. Although she did not like math, Mr. Salman Khan's friendly voice guided her through each step. Martha clicked the answers, and she got most of them right.

In the English lessons, Martha read short stories, learned new words and listened to English songs. She felt happy. However, she found English grammar quite difficult.

For Martha, health sciences classes were magical. Martha enjoyed animations of how the human body works. She also loved the videos about how vaccines protect us against diseases. The best part was when Martha learned how to take care of people with skin cuts. During the health science lessons, Martha felt that her wonderful dream was coming true.

Life in the past

Life in the past was very different from what it is now. People did not have the same technology that we have today. They did not have smartphones, computers, or the internet. Communication was much slower, and people had to rely on letters, telegrams, and in-person conversations to keep in touch with each other.

Transportation was also very different. Cars and airplanes did not exist, and people used horse-drawn carriages, boats, and trains for travel. This made travel much slower, harder, and unsafe than it is today.

Education was not widely available. There were much fewer schools than we have today. Also, many families could not send their children to school. At home, the kids learned the skills needed for manual jobs, such as building, painting, cooking, cleaning, and gardening.

However, life was not completely dark. People often had stronger connections because they supported each other. Also, families had more time to spend together and to enjoy their hobbies.

Pearling in the Arabian Gulf

Pearling has been major industry in the Gulf since 2000 BCE. The season for diving for pearl oysters, the shellfish that contain pearls, started in early June. A huge fleet of pearling boats departed together for the oyster bank and returned at the end of September. The oyster boats either stayed near one particular bank or moved around to different banks. There were about twenty members of the crew on board the boat, one of whom led a rhythmic chant.

Pearl-diving was a difficult and exhausting job, involving long hours of work from soon after sunrise to just before sunset. The diver dived down into the water with a stone attached to his foot, gathered the oysters, then pulled on the rope as a signal for a crew member on board to bring him up to the surface. After a short rest, he went down again.

The divers opened the oyster shells the following morning, with the captain looking on. Rainwater was used to store the oysters in, since it removed the greenish colour that the oysters had. ### Desert of Arabia

Throughout history, it was very difficult for people to inhabit Arabia since sandy desert makes up most of this difficult environment. The first Bedouins to live in the desert discovered sources of water in the sand dunes. In these areas, known as 'oases', they planted date gardens and built their homes, known as 'Arishah' or 'Khaimah' from the date palms. Since the sixteenth century, the Bani Yas tribe and other nomadic clans shared the surrounding areas. During the summer months, they wandered in search of grazing.

The Bedouins believe that the camel is a great gift. First, the animal was perfectly suited to the desert environment as it was able to go without water for long periods of time. Camels helped the local tribesmen to travel across the desert and carry their loads through regions where other means of transport were impossible.

In addition, the camel's milk and meat were a source of nourishment because of the vitamins they contained, and its hide and hair were used to make leather goods and clothing. For the tribesmen, camels were a sign of wealth, and they took great care of their well-being.
