Part 4.1: Inference Question

Write your answer below. Use full sentences.

Scenario:

Hasan recently joined an engineering firm that specializes in cutting-edge technology, particularly robotics and artificial intelligence. He was initially excited about the opportunity to work with such advanced systems but felt a bit apprehensive as he had never worked with robots before. Upon arriving at the office, Hasan was introduced to Robo 712, a humanoid robot that would be his assistant. The robot could assist with a variety of tasks, including data entry and analysis, and worked tirelessly without needing breaks, unlike human employees.

Hasan felt uneasy about depending on the robot for some of the tasks, as he had always been used to doing things manually and independently. Despite this, he noticed that the robot's efficiency allowed the team to complete tasks much faster than before. His colleague Ahmad, a robotics expert, explained how working with robots was improving productivity in the office and how technology like this could revolutionize industries in the future. Ahmad was enthusiastic about the potential benefits of robotics, including saving lives, improving learning experiences, and making routine tasks easier for people.

While Hasan saw the advantages of working with robots, he remained cautious. Two weeks later, he came across an advertisement for a job that was similar to the one he used to have, but without any involvement in robotics.

Question:

Do you think Hasan will stay at his current job, or will he apply for the other job?

Reading Passage:

Technology has revolutionized the way we live, work, and communicate. From the invention of the internet to the development of smartphones, technological advancements have transformed society in ways that were once unimaginable. In the workplace, computers, software, and automation have made tasks more efficient, enabling businesses to perform complex tasks in a fraction of the time. The rise of artificial intelligence (AI) and machine learning has further advanced this transformation, allowing systems to learn from data and improve over time. This has led to the creation of self-driving cars, virtual assistants, and advanced robotics that can perform tasks previously reserved for humans.

While technology has brought many benefits, there are also challenges. The widespread use of technology has led to concerns about privacy and security. As more personal data is shared online, there is an increased risk of cyberattacks and data breaches. Furthermore, automation has led to job displacement in some industries, as machines and robots replace human workers. Despite these challenges, the benefits of technology cannot be ignored. It has enabled innovations in medicine, education, and communication, connecting people around the world in ways that were once impossible.

The future of technology looks bright, with advancements in quantum computing, biotechnology, and AI promising to further shape the way we live. However, it is important to balance technological progress with ethical considerations to ensure that technology serves humanity's best interests.

Reading Passage:

People around the world live in a variety of environments, from bustling cities to quiet rural villages. Cities are often home to large populations and offer many opportunities, such as jobs, education, and entertainment. These places are known for their fast pace and modern infrastructure, with tall buildings, busy streets, and a diverse mix of cultures. In contrast, rural areas are quieter, often surrounded by nature, and offer a slower, more peaceful way of life. People living in rural areas often have close-knit communities and enjoy the beauty of natural surroundings, such as forests, mountains, and lakes.

Different places around the world have unique characteristics. For instance, some cities, like New York and Tokyo, are famous for their iconic landmarks, such as the Statue of Liberty and the Tokyo Tower. These landmarks attract millions of tourists every year. On the other hand, places like the Sahara Desert or the Amazon Rainforest are known for their extreme climates and unique ecosystems. Each place has its own charm, and people choose where to live based on their needs, lifestyle, and preferences.

Whether in a busy city or a peaceful rural village, the people who live there create the character of a place. Communities, whether small or large, have their own culture, traditions, and way of life. People shape the environment around them, just as the places they live shape their experiences and identities.
