A Frightening Experience

When I was eight, I lived in a lovely village near the sea. It was a great place for children and I spent my days playing with my friends and looking after the goats and chickens. People farmed crops on the land around their houses, which they used for cooking.

One day, I faced the most frightening experience I've ever had. The sky above the village turned dark. It was the morning, but suddenly it seemed like the middle of the night. Then, we noticed the sea. We watched in shock as the waves rose higher and the seawater started to flow towards our village.

"Look at the sea!" someone cried. "It must be a flood. We need to run to safety!"

We ran into the nearby hills, taking nothing with us but the village's animals. Oh no! I thought. I'm sure the whole village is going to get flooded. We watched as the water crashed through our village washing away all the houses, trees and plants. By the evening, there was nothing left where our village used to be.

Now, I live in a nice apartment in a busy city, but I'm unhappy that I don't have my easy village life any longer. If the village was still there, I'd definitely move there again. I loved the village before the flood happened, I think it was the perfect place to grow up. There's not much space in the city for keeping animals, but I can still enjoy spending time with my friends.

Questions:

1-What did the author do in the village?

1. She cooked at home.
2. She grew some vegetables.
3. She cared for animals.

2-The village was completely destroyed _____.

1. in the morning
2. by sun set
3. during the night

3-Why is the author sad in the city?

1. They would like to be living in their old home.
2. They think their life is too simple now.
3. They don't enjoy being in their new house.

4-What does the author say is similar about the city and the village?

1. They are both great places for children to grow up.
2. There are opportunities to see friends in both places.
3. There are many areas in each place to look after animals.

5-This story is mainly about ____.

1. deciding to move to the city
2. living in a beautiful village
3. an extreme weather event

Environment Blog: The Rising Seas

For some time now, there's been lots of news about the rising temperatures and extreme weather caused by climate change. However, from my point of view, one of the greatest challenges for the planet's environment that I've heard about is rising sea levels. I'm interested in environmental issues. A few months ago, I decided to explore the topic of rising seas further by watching a documentary about the issue. It was very worrying.

The documentary reported that sea levels have risen between 21-24cm in the last 140 years. Apparently, at the start of the last century the rise was too slow to be obvious. Then, I was shocked to hear that around half the increase happened during the last 30 years. That can't be right! I thought. There's been no increase in sea levels here! Unfortunately, the documentary proved me wrong.

The documentary talked about global warming and showed how the ice in the North and South Pole is melting. This is why the seawater is rising and causing floods in some areas. I'm certain that this must be the reason for the problems that some people who live by the sea have. I can imagine the sea water washing away some people's homes and flooding land used for producing food.

The documentary predicted that the problem is going to get worse in the future. I'm sorry to say that I think they're right. Luckily, there are now many individuals and companies that are working to solve environmental issues. If I wasn't still in school, I'd join an organisation which is trying to slow down the effects of climate change.

Questions:

1-The author thinks that one of the biggest dangers for the planet is the ____.

1. rise in temperatures
2. increased amount of seawater
3. frequent bad weather

2-Why did the author watch the documentary?

1. to learn more about a problem affecting the Earth
2. to discover all the reasons why the climate is changing
3. to explore different types of environments

3-The ocean levels increased fastest ____.

1. over 100 years ago
2. in more recent years
3. at the start of the last century

4-Paragraph 3 is mainly about _____.

1. what the causes and effects of climate change are
2. how food and homes are being damaged
3. why all areas near the sea are flooding

5-How did the author's feelings about the environment change from the beginning to the end of the blog?

1. They were interested in environmental issues, but then they lost interest.
2. They were worried about environmental problems, but they thought they were going to improve.
3. They thought that the environment was in trouble and this opinion didn't change.

Sarah Becomes a Vet

As a child, I used to rescue small animals all the time. I even kept some as pets. My parents thought I should work with animals. I've always had this passion to help and heal animals, which motivated me to study veterinary medicine. As soon as I had graduated, I volunteered to work at two different locations to gain experience.

I first worked at the K9 Centre for Retired Police Dogs. These dogs were once used to protect property, prevent crime, and find lost people. I was anxious when I saw the dogs. I thought they were dangerous but when I met them, I realised I had nothing to worry about. They all loved being taken out for walks every day. However, I noticed that some behaved strangely. It looks as though they're not happy, I thought to myself at the time. I checked the dogs' daily timetable, looked through their medical reports and noticed the food they were being given. "The dogs' diet could be improved," I informed the manager. I also asked if he could add more daily activities for the dogs like swimming and exploring a beach.

Next, I worked at the wildlife hospital. They had the best team. Frankly, I couldn't wait to work with the wild animals. However, I've never dealt with one before. I was scared because I didn't know what to expect. The team rescued a young zebra, and they told me I had to treat its wounds. In just a short time, the young zebra and I trusted each other. I'd spoken to some members of the team about being scared so they gave me a 'thumbs up' as soon as I had finished my work. They could see I'd become more sure of myself.

Questions:

1-The author was inspired to become a vet because she _____.

1. loved having lots of pets
2. wanted to save animals
3. took her parents advice

2-According to the text, the dogs at the centre _____.

1. keep everyone safe
2. search for missing people
3. enjoy their daily walks

3-Sarah wasn't satisfied with the dogs' wellbeing, so she told the manager to _____.

1. develop the dogs' meal plan
2. check the dogs' health
3. review the dogs' timetable

4-Paragraph 2 is mainly about the _____.

1. retired dogs' routine at the K9 Centre
2. author's positive changes for the dogs' wellbeing
3. new activities added to the dogs' program

5-Sarah was excited to _____.

1. meet the wildlife team
2. work at the wildlife hospital
3. deal with the wildlife

6-The team was happy for Sarah because she _____.

1. rescued a wild animal
2. controlled her fear
3. was gentle to the zebra

7-How did the author change during her volunteering experience?

1. She was nervous at first then confident at the end.
2. She was confident at first then struggled at the end.
3. She was excited at first then disappointed at the end.
