Gergaon is an ancient custom which Arabs inherited it from their grandparent's .It marks 15 of Ramadan. People in the Arabian Gulf celebrate it because it is a blessing night.

Preparations begin a week beforehand. The houses and streets are decorated. Also a lot of shopping is done for food, clothes and gifts. Parents buy new clothes and cloth bags for their children. Moreover sweets are bought for children. In the early evening of 14 of Ramadan people wear new clothes and children go in groups to neighbor's houses while they sing some traditional songs. People give out money, sweets and small toys. At this night families exchange visits and greetings.

Describing a shop market

Tuesday Street Market is held in the main square in Sitra. It opens every Tuesday at 3:00 pm in the afternoon and closes at 6:00 pm in the evening. I usually go there with my aunt and my friend.

There are many stalls in this market. You can buy food like: fruit, popcorn plus ice cream. You can buy different kinds of clothes but they are usually unfashionable. There are also some stalls which sell perfumes. Also, people can get different kinds of accessories which are cheap and are not very good quality. I like it because I find every thing I want there and I see friends there as well. Sometimes I get a good discount on clothes that I buy.

I think you should go to Tuesday Street Market and enjoy your time. It is a perfect market .

Rescue operation

On a hot day, we were eating lunch in our house.

In the middle of our meal we smelled smoke and heard a scream coming from our neighborhood. We went out immediately. We were shocked because our close neighbor's house was on fire!

The first thing my father did, was calling the fire fighters. Next he tried to help the children who were inside, but he couldn't because the door was on flame and it seemed that there wasn't any adult inside. Unfortunately, the fire fighters were late, so my father brought a ladder and climbed up to the first floor, and he could help them from the danger.

Meanwhile, the children's parents came up and they were very shocked and they froze when saw the burning house. We directly told them that their children were safe.

In my opinion , my father is a real hero , because he could help the children out of danger and I think that the parents shouldn't leave their children alone.
