Homework

Speaker: 1

I get loads of homework at the moment. I'd be lying if I said that I enjoy doing it, but I've come to realise that it gives me a chance to go over what we've learned in class, and be sure that it all makes sense. I suppose the alternative would be to have longer lessons, learning everything more slowly and thoroughly, but I don't think I'd be able to focus if we had to spend any more time than we already do in class.

Speaker: 2

If I had the choice, of course I'd prefer not to have any homework, and to be honest it doesn't make any difference what day it is. At the weekend, the last thing I want to think about is school work, and after school, I'd rather just chill out. But I realise homework is important. For me, it's much more motivating if we're asked to do some individual work and find out all about something, rather than just do exercises or learn things by heart.

Speaker : 3

Sometimes I do homework with a friend, either at home or in a café, and other times one of our parents might have a look at what we're doing. I don't see why we shouldn't be able to do it with someone else, as long as we get it done. Though what I really think is that there are far more interesting things we could be doing in our free time, if our lessons were clearer, or if everyone concentrated more in class, we wouldn't have to do any at all!

Speaker 4

I can see why we have to do homework, though I'd rather not, if I could choose! I just find that by the time I get home from school I'm worn out, I feel like I've been on the go for hours, and the last thing I want to do is open my books all over again. You probably think it would be easier at the weekend, when we've had a chance to switch off, but that's the problem, it's sometimes even harder to get into it when you're feeling relaxed!

Speaker 5

I guess the point of homework is for our teachers to be able to check what we've learned, so I don't think it's right when I hear my classmates going on about their mum or dad giving them a hand with it. I sometimes chat to mine about what I've got to do, especially if it's a bigger piece of work that involves a bit of background reading or some research, but I'll always do my homework on my own afterwards.

Speaker 6

Of course there are things I'd rather spend my time doing than homework, but I wouldn't go as far as to say that there's no point in doing it at all. I know some people who would, though! What I find is that no matter which room I do my homework in, there's always something to distract me, something else going on, so in my opinion, it'd be better to spend more time in class instead. I don't suppose our teachers would like that, though!
