Using mobile phones at school

Can using mobile phones at schools be beneficial? This issue has been hotly debated for many years. Carrying mobile phones in school is both beneficial and arguable at the same time. To better understand this issue, I believe it is important to explore both views in depth.

On the one hand, mobile phones can be a great additional tool at the lessons. There are so many things to do with a device: audio and video, QR codes, educational apps, etc. Thus, smartphones can provide students with instant access to information.

What is more, all modern children get on well with new technologies, so it would be even more comfortable and beneficial to use mobile phones as an educational tool. In addition, the safety of students is above all. It is important for parents to keep in touch with their children when they are out.

On the other hand, mobile phones can distract students from schoolwork. Instead of listening to the teacher, children may play online games, check social media, and chat with friends. Also, mobile phones at school can be used for cheating. Looking up answers online is what students do when they are unsure of themselves. This may degrade students' capability to learn.

In conclusion I must say that in my opinion, mobile phones should be allowed in school, as they have become an important part of everyday life but certainly, students should use them wisely.

Community connections in the digital age

How has the Internet affected our communities? This issue has been hotly debated for many years. While some argue that the Internet has created a sense of disconnection among people and their communities, others believe that it has improved communication and brought people closer together. To understand this issue, I believe it is important to explore both views.

On the one hand, there is a growing concern that the rise of the Internet and technology has led people to spend more time indoors. With easy access to social media and entertainment, people have become more isolated, leading to a lack of personal connections. As a result, some argue that people are not as close to their local community as they used to be.

On the other hand, the Internet has created opportunities for people to connect with each other in their communities. Social media have enabled people to share information, organize events, and discuss local issues. Besides, they have made it easier for individuals to support one another with ease.

In conclusion, it is evident that the Internet has both positive and negative impacts on our communities. Therefore, it's important to balance online and offline interactions to fully benefit from the digital world.

Fast food

No one can deny that fast food is one of the debatable topics these days. Fast food is popular all around the world. However, people have different views about it. Some people like eating fast food and they believe it has some benefits, while others think that it has some drawbacks. This essay discusses the two views.

On the one hand, fast food saves time and effort. In other words, it can make life easier and more comfortable as one can order his or her favourite meal and it is delivered in a minute. For example, it is great help to women who work and people who do not know how to cook. It is also useful to people who are so busy and have no time to cook. Moreover, fast food is always served hot, and it is very tasty.

On the other hand, fast food badly affects health. It is unhealthy, and it causes some health problems like obesity and heart diseases. That is because fast food has a lot of calories, and it is very high in fats, sugar, and salt. Therefore, people who often eat fast food grow fat. Add to this, it is costly, and families spend more money on fast food than on homemade healthy food.

In short, it is clear that fast food has some positive and negative sides. In my opinion, the benefits of fast food are more than the disadvantages. I believe it saves time and effort for busy people. I believe we can eat fast food, but not very often.
