A Story

By Ghada Al-Mawlani

It was a foggy cold night in winter. A week before my friends and Sughra, Abrar, Fatima, Masooma and I had decided to go trekking in The Himalayas Mountains. We had arranged to meet up at 10 pm in the bus shelter. When I arrived, Abrar and Sughra were waiting there.

After two hours, we arrived at The Himalayas Mountains. When we had go everything ready, we started trekking. We had walked a few miles by the time we noticed that the sky was becoming cloudy. Just then it started to rain heavily. Luckily we found a cave, and we stayed in it until the rain stopped. In the morning we were all scary because there was a dead man in the cave!! A few minutes later Fatima started to cry, and Abrar was frozen in her place. Immediately we ran fast to find help. While we were running we met a police constable and we told him about the dead man that we saw in the cave. After that, he called the police office and asked us some questions about why we were there, when we saw the dead man and where. When the other police men arrived they asked us to take them to the cave and do home.

After that terrible journey we were at home. My friends and I were tired and afraid. In the end we read in the newspaper that the police men caught the killer, but they said that they found the dead man not us!! At last we felt comfortable and a bit happy.
