And you call that a holiday

Not everyone enjoys a relaxing holiday around a pool getting a tan. Andy Thomas interviews two people who have a different view on what a holiday is.

Oliver Mason

Oliver Mason looks like any other teacher and makes a good impression in his smart shirt and tie. But he has an unusual interest in volcanoes. Whenever he has some free time, he travels to a new volcano to explore. He told me he found them fascinating and that he had travelled the world visiting them. His favourite location is Mauna Loa in Hawaii, because it's the home of the biggest active volcano in the world. "Active volcanoes are much more interesting. Also, there are many activities you can do at volcanoes. I've just come back from an unforgettable trip to Nicaragua where I went volcano surfing down the side of a volcano!" said Oliver. That's pretty dangerous, even with safety tools. He showed me his scars and told me that I would love volcano surfing if I tried it. But I replied that it wasn't for me so I don't think I would love it as much as he does.

Erica Reid

I was looking forward to chatting with Erica Reid because, like me, she is a professional scuba diver. But in the end, there was a big difference between us. You see, I don't like her friends from underwater world. She told me that she loved spending time at the underwater life. Every summer she goes on a holiday somewhere in the world just to swim in different underwater environments. She has swum with big whales in the Antarctic and scary sharks in the Bahamas. She told me her most enjoyable trip had been to Mexico where she had swum with whale sharks. "They are the largest fish in the world, but they aren't dangerous," Erica said. Personally, I would prefer not to find out. For her next trip she has made the decision to travel to Australia, where she's going to swim with crocodiles. Send us some postcard, Erica!

A. Read the texts and answer the following questions. (4 x 2=8 marks)

8

1. What is unusual about Oliver?

.....

2. Why does Oliver like Hawaii?

3. What is Erica's job?
