Last Saturday was my fortieth birthday. I got up early but my husband and children stayed in bed. I thought, 'That's ok. I can open my birthday cards now.' I looked in every room in the house, but nothing - no cards, presents, flowers, or chocolates. I was upset but I thought, ' it doesn't matter. I can wait.'

An hour later the postman arrived and gave me lots of envelopes.' Fantastic - my cards!' I said, and then I saw that the letters were not for me. My husband and children got up and said, 'Happy Birthday!' but didn't give me a card or present.

Then at twelve o'clock a taxi arrived at the house. I thought it was a mistake but my husband said, 'Get in the taxi. I've got your jacket and suitcase.' We went to the airport and arrived in Paris that afternoon, although I wished we travelled by train. We went shopping for my birthday present. At first, I thought of buying a watch or jewelry but all of a sudden I changed my mind and picked up a beautiful painting of the city. In the evening we had a delicious dinner - seafood, steak, and French cheese.

The next day we had breakfast in the oldest café in Paris, went on a boat on the River Seine, and walked along the famous streets. We arrived home on Sunday evening after a perfect weekend. On Monday I asked my husband, 'How did you keep the holiday a secret?' ' at the beginning I tried with a travel agency but they asked a lot for two nights, so I asked Jim, my friend, and he told me to book through the internet for a better price.

When I left university, I wanted to travel so I went to south Africa to visit friends and family. I loved it there because the country is very interesting and the people are very friendly, but after a year I came back to England and trained to be an English teacher. My first job was in Germany in a small school where my students were adults and children (but not in the same class!). At first, it was very difficult because there were a lot of things I didn't know. My classes were usually in the morning and in the evening so I had the afternoon to think about my lessons. I loved the job because everything was new and exciting and my students were very kind to me. Sometimes we went to a restaurant or café and they practiced their English and I practiced my German.

I lived in Germany for two years and then I left because I wanted to see other countries. I was very sad to go but I knew it was time to leave. My next job was Bulgaria. It's a beautiful country next to Greece, turkey and Romania. My life there was very different because I was the only English person in the town so everybody knew me! I was a teacher at a secondary school and in my first year there I had lessons with every student in the school. It was very difficult to remember everyone's name because I had hundreds of students! My life there was very busy so I didn't really have enough time to learn the language, but I did my best and I can still remember some words today.

I'm living in England again now and I'm not teaching, but I often think about those jobs and all the great students I had.

1. Description of a place

Last week, our park was always dirty, empty, and. There was sad lots of rubbish and little dead grass. Then some students in our school decided to volunteer and clean and tidy the park. They did a great job. First, they cleaned the park and removed all the rubbish and yellow dead grass. They painted the benches red, they repaired the playground, and planted a lot of flowers. If you come to the park, you will be very happy. It is a nice place filled now. Now, every day we can enjoy walking there and see colourful and beautiful flowers with green grass. Every corner has a red rubbish bin so people can throw rubbish in them. We love going to our clean and nice park now.

Hunter D. Adams was born in May 28, 1945 in Washington D.C. His nickname is Patch but he does not know why he got it. He grew up in Germany, Japan, Texas and the other places where his father worked as a soldier. He was one of the best students in maths and science, who got excellent marks without studying much. When he was very young, Hunter Adams was very unhappy, and he spent many years in the 1960s and 1970s in hospitals.

When he left hospital, Adams decided to become a doctor, so he went to George Washington University for a year but then he went to another university in Virginia. When he was there, he did things in a different way. For example, he didn't like the doctors' white coats, so he wore shirts with flowers on them when he visited his patients, and he tried to make them laugh. The doctors at the university didn't like Adams very much because he was too different.

But Adams believed that people in hospital need more than medicine. He saw unhappy and lonely people, and he tried to help them not only as patients, but as people too. He spent a lot of time with children in the hospital, and often put a special red nose on his face to look like a clown and to make the children laugh.

When he finished medical school and became a doctor, Adams opened his own hospital, called 'The Gesundheit Institute', together with some other doctors. They wanted it to be a place with a different way of working with sick people.

Hunter Adams became famous during the 1980s, and in 1998, Universal Pictures made a film about his life. It was very successful. In the film (called Patch Adams), Robin Williams played Adams. Williams said, "Hunter is a really loving person, who believes that patients need a doctor who is a friend. I enjoyed playing him."
