Whales are large mammals that live in the sea. They live in small groups. ~~live their entire lives in water.~~ They are the only mammals that have adapted to live in the ocean. They are a highly endangered species. They breathe through the blowholes into lungs.

Whales have soft bodies that help them move easily through the water. The largest whale is the blue whale which grows up to 29 meters long and weighs about 109 tonnes. The female whales are larger than males. There are 66 kinds of blue whales. They hunt other animals like fish and kill them with their teeth.

Whales are hunted for their meat and oil. The oil was used to make wax candles. Today the number of whales is increasing because of the discovery of petrol.
