(Computer)

The computer is a double-edge weapon. So some people are with and others are against it. According to people who support, they see that we live at the age of the computer as it breaks through every field in our life, for example medical, educational, engineering, and commercial fields. In addition to many other fields everywhere. These people also see that the computer is far more efficient than human beings. It has much better and can store huge amounts of information and it can do calculations in no time. The computer has a great characteristics as it doesn't suffer from lack of sleep, so it never feels tired and works efficiently all the time. One of the most important parts of the computer is the internet which is used for fun, paying bills, shopping, paying salaries, reserving seats on planes, learning and having courses in different fields. In addition to telling tomorrow's weather and many other jobs can do them accurately and quickly.

Other people who don't support the computer see that it is not important to possess a computer at all neither in their homes, nor in their offices. They prefer to depend on simple machines for communications such as calculator, fax, typewriter, telephone,....etc. they think with them everything is done in a relax manner because they are easier and simpler than the computer. As well as they avoid us taking the risk of using computers. These people also refuse to become part of the new internet world as it is a matter of wasting and gaining bad habits. They see that they see that they will never think of buying even if it becomes able to think, able to act on its own, or accept the responsibility for all mistakes it makes.

Read the following passage then answer the questions

The marathon

The marathon is an event named after the run of a Greek soldier, Pheidippides. In 490 b c Pheidippides ran from Marathon to Athens (about 26 miles, or 40 kilometers) to deliver news about the Greeks' success in a battle against the Persians. Running through the mountains and rocky land was extremely difficult. After Pheidippides arrived in Athens and delivered his news, he fell down and died. The first modern Olympics in 1896 included a race of 26 miles (40 kilometers), called a marathon, to commemorate Pheidippides' run.

Hero

Time and time again, it has been shown that the bond between a person and his horse is incredibly strong. This has been proved by the countless stories about horses that have saved their owners' lives. This past weekend in Canada, once again a boy owes his life to his horse. Alan is a twelve-year-old boy who lives with his family, in the country. Alan was out with his horse, "Hero" when it started getting dark. The horse seemed alert and moved cautiously. When they reached home, Alan could hardly see anything. He was about to dismount and lead his horse to the stable, when the horse started stomping and neighing uncontrollably, making it impossible for Alan to get off. In panic, Alan made out the shape of a cougar about to attack him as the horse reared on his hind legs, protecting the boy. In the fight that followed, the horse managed to get closer to the house and shake Alan off onto the patio. Alan ran into the house for help. The family called 911 and waited for help to arrive as the horse and the cougar continued to fight outside their door. Luckily the police arrived just in time to save the horse. They were able to shoot the cougar and pull it away. The horse was seriously injured in the fight but is expected to make a full recovery. Alan's parents were grateful that Hero was able to protect their son from the cougar. Hero is sure to be pampered for the rest of his life by the whole family.
