2 Pair Work

Language Builder

Explain that we use some in affirmative statements: I want some coffee. We commonly use any in negative statements and in questions: I don't want any coffee. Is there any coffee? Some is also used in questions when the question is an offer. For example: Do you want some coffee?

1 Listen and Discuss

Language Builder

Explain that Would you like...? is more polite and more formal than Do you want...?

Language Builder

Explain that for here or to go is a phrase heard in fast-food restaurants in the United States. Customers are asked if they would like to eat at the restaurant (for here?) or take the food with them (to go?).

2 Pair Work

Teaching Tip

Encourage students to keep a vocabulary notebook. To help them remember meanings, they should use illustration, description or, as a last resort, translation.

Additional Activity

Play a menu chain game. Have students use the menu to say what they would like. The first student says, for example, I'd like some shrimp. The second student says the same sentence and adds a new food or drink: I'd like some shrimp and some coffee. Continue until someone makes a mistake.

- In most countries around the world, the main meal of the day is eaten at midday. A lighter meal is eaten later at night, after 9 P.M.
- In the U.S., the main meal is eaten at the end of the day, between 6 and 8 P.M., and the midday lunch is usually a lighter meal.
